A professional saxophonist, teacher, scholar and composer, Dr. James Noyes is recognized as one of the finest educators on the scene today. His extensive musical background and ability to connect with students of all ages and interests is renowned. A woodwind teacher since 1987, he has also taught numerous subjects at the college level since 1990. In 2006, Dr. Noyes added beginner/intermediate piano lessons, which also include learning to play and sing together – now, that’s a lot of fun! Lessons and recitals are at his home studio in upper Manhattan. Flexible times, reasonable rates.

Let’s get together and play!
